The Important Issue.

U. S. Senator John F. Dryden, in discussing the matter of the United States Senatorship in this State with a representative of the New York Herald, said:

"There is one great question of supreme importance that is likely to be the dominating issue in this year's elections in all parts of the country. I refer to the American policy of protection to home industry. The enemies of this system are everywhere preparing to make an attack upon it all along the line. It is marvellous how soon the lessons of recent calamitous experience are forgotten by many people. It is only a little more than a decade ago that this country was writhing in the pangs of distress and universal business prostration, brought upon it by the tariff for revenue act of the Cleveland administration. Furnace fires were out, the cogs and wheels of factories and mills ceased their prosperous hum, tens of thousands of willing workers were idle on the streets, poverty and suffering haunted the homes of industry, business of all kinds was languishing, and soup houses and poor committees were everywhere in evidence. The protective tariff law of the McKinley administration cured all these evils as by magic, and the country to-day enjoys a boundless prosperity under this system. What madness it would be to abandon this policy and go back to the policy of disaster! And yet this is what restless and unscrupulous politicians, willing to ride into power over the ruins of our industries, are proposing. They hope to capture the House of Representatives and to make gains in the Senate, and thus pave the way to the destruction of our protective fabric. I am inexorably opposed to any revision of the tariff in the direction of free trade. I believe that such a revision would again and at once bring measureless disaster upon industry and business. New Jersey, with its six hundred millions of annual industrial products, is deeply interested in this question, and whether I am re-elected or not I fervently trust that this State will not suffer the dangerous mischance of being represented in the Senate by any one whose absolute and high-principled devotion to the protective principle is open to the slightest doubt or question."

The Congressional Campaign.

The Congressional campaign in New Jersey this fall promises to be decidedly interesting. Nine of the State's ten districts are represented by Republicans, and a big fight to retain this supremacy will be made. Some of the New Jersey Representatives are veterans in the service. Congressman Loudenslager is serving his seventh term. So is Congressman Gardner. Congressman Howell is serving his sixth term, and so are Congressmen Fowler and Parker. Since the Republican landslide of 1892 the Democrats have never been able to elect more than three Congressmen in New Jersey in any one year, and twice the Republicans have sent a solid delegation to Congress. To find the time when the State was represented by a solid Democratic delegation in Congress it is necessary to go back to the election of 1834, when the Democrats elected their candidates in the six districts which then comprised New Jersey. In seventy-two years they have not repeated the feat.—Madison Eagle.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

HOW WEASELS HUNT.

The Graceful Pose of the Animals When on the Trail.

The lithe grace of the weasel may be observed whenever it is on the trail. At an even speed, with nose to the ground, its reddish brown back seems literally to glide along through the rank herbage by the bank.

It may be the scent of a rat, and the trail may take it in and out of the bank a good many times before it comes up with its victim. It may even have to swim a stream before its persistence is rewarded. It is wonderful how small a hole that long, arched body can glide into and emerge from without the slightest difficulty.

When it has caught and killed its prey its movements are equally graceful as it carries the spoil home to its hole. Crossing a Kentish field I saw a weasel coming along under the hedgerow red toothed from the chase. There was the same sinuous motion of the back, but the little beast's head was held as high as possible and from its mouth hung the limp carcass of a young rat, freshly killed. The weasel held it by the neck and so high, for all the shortness of its legs, that only the end of the rat's tail dragged through the grass.

A family of weasels will often hunt in company, and this is naturally a most interesting sight to witness. The ability of the weasel to enter exceedingly small holes is owing entirely to the structure of its body—its flat head, long neck and short limbs and tail. In a cornrick it can pursue mice with ease along their burrows.—London Mail.

GAME DOGS AND GAME.

A Remarkable Instance of the Influence of Heredity.

The setter ate the mutton chop greedily, but he would have none of the partridge bones.

"A good game dog," said his master, "can't eat game. Its taste is repugnant to him. This is a remarkable instance of the influence of heredity.

"Game dogs have been trained for many generations not to eat the game—the birds and rabbits and what not—which they bring back to their masters in their mouths. They have been trained to consider that the eating of such game would be a disgrace and an unpardonable sin, the same as bank clerks have been trained to consider that the pocketing of a few dollars from the millions they annually handle would be a disgrace and a sin.

"And the result in the game dogs' case has been that this moral abhorrence of game, suggested to them by their masters, has been transmitted in its passage down from one generation to another, into an actual physical abhorrence. In the matter of game, thanks to heredity, game dogs now are never tempted. They can't sin.

"It would be a good thing for policy holders if, in the same way, man's moral distinctination to steal had been changed by heredity to an actual physical aversion of other people's money."

Ancient Tricks.

The arts of juggling were, as has been proved by learned writers, of high antiquity. The Hirpini, who lived near Rome, jumped through burning coals; women in early times were accustomed to walk over burning coals in Cappadocia, and the exhibition of balls and cups is often mentioned in the works of the ancients. It was as far back as the third century that one Fermus, or Firmius, who endeavored to make himself emperor in Egypt, suffered a smith to forge iron on an anvil placed on his breast, and rope dancers with balancing poles are mentioned by Petronius and others, while the various feats of horsemanship exhibited in our circuses passed, in the thirteenth century, from Egypt to the Byzantine court and thence over all Europe.

A Proud Man.

"Did you see that proud man going out just now?" asked the cashier. "Proud as Lucifer. Know what he did? Found that I had made a mistake in his favor and handed me back the change. Now, I wonder why it is that people are so proud when they have discovered that they are honest. I could rake in a lot of extra coin if I availed myself of the mistakes that are made here every hour of the day, but I don't on general principles, because I am naturally honest. It's nothing to be proud of."—New York Sun.

Where Taxes Are Unknown.

Orsa, in Swoden, has in the course of a generation sold $5,750,000 worth of trees and by means of judicious replanting has provided for a similar income every thirty or forty years. In consequence of the development of this commercial wealth there are no taxes. Railways and telephones are free and so are the schoolhouses, teaching and many other things.

Worth Knowing.

"Sensible looking girl across the aisle."

"Yes. Like to know her?"

"No, thank you. Handsome hat she's wearing."

"Yes. She made it herself."

"Eh! Introduce me, please."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Odd.

Hicks—What do you think of that university making Dumley a doctor of laws? Wicks—Oh, well, the universities do very crazy things sometimes. Hicks—Yes, and yet they are always supposed to be in possession of their faculties.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Unfeeling.

Mother (angrily)—The brute! He has dared to scold you? Newly Married Daughter (sobbing)—Not so bad as all that, mamma. I scolded him from the house five minutes ago, and the unfeeling brute hasn't come back yet!

Tobacco Smoke.

The composition of tobacco smoke is complex. Analysis gives nicotine, pyridic bases, formic aldehyde, ammonia, methylamin, pyrrol, sulphuretted hydrogen, prussic acid, butyric acid, carbonic acid, oxide of carbon, the steam of water, an etherized empyreumatic oil, and tarry or resinous products, among which we detect small quantities of phenol. Of all the products of tobacco the most venomous are nicotine, pyridic and methylamin bases, prussic acid, sulphuretted hydrogen, oxide of carbon and empyreumatic oil, and all that we draw into our lungs with more or less satisfaction.—Harper's Weekly.

Under the Rose.

The expression "under the rose," or sub rosa, to indicate secrecy, originates in the Greek mythological story that Cupid gave Harpocrates, the god of silence, a golden rose, desiring him at the same time not to betray the amour of Venus. According to another account, the traitors against the Greek states during the invasion of Xerxes held their meetings in an Athenian arbor formed of rose bushes. At Greek and Roman banquets the guests were always crowned with roses, and a cluster of these hung above the banqueting table was a sign that what was said in that place should not be repeated elsewhere.

Decline of the Bath.

One strange feature in the advance of civilisation has been the decline of the bath. Washing in the golden age of Greece and Rome was a fine art, and baths were built with as much care as temples. There has been a revival in this century of public baths, but from an aesthetic point of view they cannot compare with those of a barbarous age. This is not an age of washers.—London Lady.

Should Have Said Shoes.

"Sir!" cried the precise young woman witheringly. "How dare you!"—Philadelphia Press.

Unreasonable Freddy.

Tommy—Ma, Freddy's crying 'cause I'm eating my cake and won't give him any. Mother—Is his own cake finished? Tommy—Yes, ma; and he cried when I was eating that too.
